We understand the importance of your obligations

Adequately verifying the identity of organisations you are transacting with and fulfilling reporting requirements to regulators and stakeholders can be a cumbersome process.

Meeting compliance obligations requires the implementation of robust Know your Customer (KYC) protocols and business verification procedures to help ensure the legitimacy of the businesses you are transacting with.

As you may have experienced, the process of identifying the overarching ownership of a company is often challenging. Verification of a business entity can be a manual, paper-based process. Costly mistakes are often made, as paper-based records and business structures can be complicated. This can be slow and potentially inaccurate – acquiring and verifying all necessary documents. Companies often have multiple levels of ownership, a labyrinth of individuals, companies and business structures all increasing the number of entities that require verification

Anti-Money Laundering (AML) and KYC checks of businesses are often conducted through organisations using costly credit reports. Successfully matched entities return with the names of associates such as share holders, directors and companies where data is available. The data from these reports require time intensive manual compilation for entity verification. This increases the risk of non-compliance, reputational damage and regulatory fines, while causing friction and frustration for all parties involved.
